

I have 6 kids of different age groups and sometimes it hard to find something they all like to do together,

My 3yr old is being assessed for autism so its hard to get him to play and interact with others.

He likes the Hula hoop pretending its a steering wheel in a car and that his driving, he has not put it down he even went to bed with it.

My 15yr old teenager dont like to do much at all only if it involves the T.V or Phone, so it was good to see her get out and play with some of the boys. They set out an obstacle course with them all and took it in turns to complete the course they really enjoyed doing it, it was fun to watch them do it together it was really nice to see them all playing together nicely.

The 15yr old did say there was not much for her to do and got bored quite quick as teenagers do. The cards was a good idea they give you lots of activities to do with the kids.

They all played Bean bag Toss, but not the 2yr old the 7yr old played for a little while but was not happy when she couldn't get them in, They was taking it in turns every time they got one in they moved back a step think the 11yr old was the winner in this she really enjoyed playing on her own with it when the others had gone off to do something else, The 11yr old liked playing with the bat and ball too.

The 10yr old liked everything in the bag he loves the football and has not stopped playing with it but has also enjoyed playing with the bat and ball. The 7yr old enjoyed playing with the bat and ball and the Hula hoop when she was able to as the 3yr old would not let her have it.

Everyone really enjoyed all the toys thank you, it got us out and doing more outside and together.
